

ADVERTISING IN ALL AGES.

Means of Announcing Wares Before the Day of the Newspaper.

The wise in the business world have for many ages availed themselves of the science of advertising. One of the most ancient modes of attracting public patronage was by means of public criers long before the age of printing. The medieval criers used to carry a horn with which to fix the attention of the people when about to make a proclamation or publication. They formed a well organized body in France as early as the twelfth century. Under a charter from Louis VII they were entitled to a penny for every time they blew their horns and could force themselves upon tavern keepers to cry their wares under a general statute. They at a very early period formed themselves into a corporation, and in 1258 obtained from Philip Augustus favorable statutes of the most tyrannical kind.

In England the public criers appear to have been a national institution at an early period. They cried all kinds of goods, and were sworn to tell "truly and well to the best of their ability and power." After a while the bellman or town crier was appointed for the benefit of the community at large. In most of the country towns of Great Britain, and even in London, there are still bellmen and parish criers, though their offices are little more than sinecures. The provincial crier's duties are of the most varied description, and relate to objects lost or found, sales by public auction or private contract, weddings, christenings or funerals.

But the bellman as a means of advertising has seen his last days. Nearly three-quarters of a century ago in England wagons were driven through the streets surmounted by revolving turrets on which were painted flaming announcements of coming events, and men on horseback rode up and down the principal thoroughfares with great bill boards strapped on either side of them to attract public attention.

The first regular newspaper, The Certain News of This Present Week, published in London in 1622, contained no advertisements; but in 1682 advertisements appeared in something like the present form in The Mercurius Politicus. Books were the articles earliest advertised. The great plague in London brought forth the first medical advertisements. In 1700 Addison, reviewing the advertisements of his time, speaks of their "odious and figures." The London Times was established in 1788, but did little to reduce advertising to a system, though it demonstrated its value and importance. The first American daily journal, The Independent Gazetteer, of New York, in 1787, in its second year contained thirty-four advertisements. From that time on the growth of American advertising developed the fact that extensive advertising was a legitimate necessity to trade. The other great metropolitan papers founded since 1838 have greatly popularized advertising. A special feature adopted about this time was "business notices" and "special notices," commanding high prices.—Washington Star.

Mamma's Only Blonde.

Said a minister: "To show you how peculiarly one young woman's mind worked I will tell you of a visit I made the other day to one of my parishioners. The eldest daughter of the house opened the door for me. It was my first call on them, as I had just assumed the charge, and was only becoming acquainted with the people."

"How are you all?" I asked.

"Oh, we're all right," she replied, in the most cheerful way.

"I'm delighted to hear it," I answered. "So few families I call on are all right that it's a pleasure to enter one household where there is no sorrow."

"Oh, I forgot," she replied with a flutter, "we have only lately had a dreadful blow and loss."

"Indeed?" I said. "I'm very sorry to hear that. What was it?"

"She went down into her handkerchief at once, and with difficulty sobbed out, 'Minnie, our little sister, died, and oh—oh—she was mamma's only blonde.'—New York Tribune.

Views on Anesthetics.

Dr. Horatio Wood shows by charts and the results of experiments that, contrary to the general belief, chloroform kills by paralyzing the respiration as well as the heart, and that other kills by paralyzing the heart before respiration has ceased. He regards nitrous oxide as the safest anesthetic—only one death having occurred out of 50,000 administrations. Ether is probably safer than chloroform in the ratio of one to three or one to five, and the best method of administering it is to use the inhaler made of cloth stretched across the wire frame which is surrounded by rubber or leather.

Plenty of fresh air should be mixed with the ether. Chloroform is probably more fatal on account of its greater specific gravity. It lies in the lungs and mixes slowly with the air, completely poisoning the nerve centers before oxygen can gain admission to the blood. It is less dangerous in hot climates, where it is more readily volatilized. Ether is more volatile and therefore less dangerous.—New York Commercial Advertiser.

A Bad Sign.

Haggard Father—Mary, I have always thought that our son prided himself on his propensity for lying. Now I am sure of it.

Patient Mother—Poor Jack! What has he been doing now?

H. P.—I was with him in the basement this evening, and every time he passed the gas meter that boy touched his nose.—Pittsburg Bulletin.

A Model Invention.

Charles Fitz Daxlow—Great head has Binkley, invented a car starter and made a little fortune out of it.

Tom Hazzbunture (sadly)—Pity he couldn't invent a newspaper starter. That's what he after.—Pittsburg Bulletin.

PENSIONS—NEW LAW.

A pension for disabled soldiers, soldiers' widows and minor children, without proof that disability of soldier originated in the army. Also for dependent parents whether dependent at time of soldier's death or not. But must prove that disability of soldier originated in the service. Rate of pension: From $6.00 to $12.00 per month; children $2.00 until 16 years of age. I will take and prosecute claims under the new law. Fee, actual expenses, not usually exceeding $1.00 and $10 if successful. No fee if pension not allowed. Have had over 20 years experience in the business. Can get a pension if it can be got. A claim under this new law will not interfere with one pending under any other law, nor with other attorney's rights. Can employ a different attorney for each case and go on with both. If two pensions should be granted, must decide which you will take and drop the other. Remember that Washington attorneys only get your case, then leave you to get all the difficult work done at home. I have done their work for a dozen years and was really entitled to all the credit of their success, while the Washington attorney took the credit and 15-20 of all the pay. Then flooded the country with circulars advertising his success. Claimants will need the services of an attorney. Those who start without one, or with one they cannot see personally, may lose much valuable time, and, possibly, their claims, in the end.
